The Issue Before the People.

Patrick Ford, the great Irish leader, has an able editorial in his Irish World which so well states the actual issue of this campaign that we cannot forbear quoting from it. The article is the more forcible as it comes from a man who has seen and carefully studied economic conditions under both freerade and protection.

"Protection to American labor," says Mr. Ford, "means good wages and a higher standard of living for the American workman. The millennium is not attainable in this world, but of all countries the one that offers the best opportunities to the poor man is America, and the most prosperous and progressive times the nation has known The adoption of British free trade on the other hand, would mean reduced wages and a lower standard of living. Common sense, history and experience teach these things.

"Now the system under which we have advanced and thrived as no people seeks the overthrow of the protective tariff, and she hopes for, and doubtless works for, the success of Grover Cleveland, who, if re-elected, will effect this and inaugurate a policy that will antagonize the American system and subserve the selfish interests of our ancient enemy. It is not necessary to inquire into motives; the facts are all

"One of the false notions they have given currency to is this: If on the adoption of free trade wages fall what matter if things are cheap? But the cost of living does not go down with wages. Thirty years ago wages fell, flour ran up from $5 per barrel to $15 per barrel. At that time calico was selling at 18 cents a yard-imported from England; today, when the workingman is in position to pay a better price, he gets his calico for 7 cents a yard-American manufacture. The times referred to were the times of free trade and low wages. Today in lands where labor is paid 20 cents to 40 cents the cost of living on the American standard, is fully as high as it is in this country.
